

We Want What's Ours

Learning from South Africa's Land Restitution Program

Oxford University Press, 2014

Bernadette Atuahene

*Professor of Law, IIT Chicago-Kent College of Law
Faculty Fellow, American Bar Foundation*

Land dispossession occurring in South Africa during colonialism and apartheid is a quintessential example of 'dignity takings', which involves the deprivation of property and also dignity. There have been numerous examples of dignity takings throughout the world, but South Africa stands apart because of its unique remedial efforts. The nation has attempted to move beyond the more common step of providing reparations (compensation for physical losses) and to instead facilitate 'dignity restoration', which is a comprehensive remedy that seeks to restore property while also confronting the underlying dehumanization, infantilization, and political exclusion that enabled the injustice. In We Want What's Ours, Bernadette Atuahene's detailed research and interviews with over 150 South Africans who participated in the nation's land restitution program provide a snapshot of South Africa's successes and failures in achieving dignity restoration.

Join us for the following book event:

Book discussion and screening of documentary film
"Sifuna Okwethu: We Want What's Ours"

Date: Thursday, 7 May 2015

Time: 5:00pm to 7:00pm

Location: Human Rights Seminar Room (5S.6.25)
University of Essex, United Kingdom

RSVP: asteine2@kentlaw.iit.edu

